Connection Policy

The criteria for a connection is generally, either:

* the operator of the services advertises this as a connection, irrespective of the time provided to make this connection; or,

* based on practical knowledge, the expectation that a reasonable person, of average fitness, could make such a connection.

Criteria include, but are not limited to: distance between pick up and set down points; complexity of an interchange site; and time that the on-going operator requires for check-in.

People who are not of average fitness should consider allowing extra time between connections, and no indication is given about proximity between transfer points.
